Join the fun and play Bunco to benefit the Georgia Ovarian Cancer Alliance. The cost to play is $10 and all money raised will be donated to the Georgia Ovarian Cancer Alliance to provide Bags of Hope!

We have fun prizes for Most Wins, Most Losses, Most Bunco's and Most Snake Eyes. Don't worry if you have never played Bunco before...we will teach you how to play in 10 seconds. Come play, have fun with your friends and help the support the Georgia Ovarian Cancer Alliance.

The mission of the Georgia Ovarian Cancer Alliance (GOCA) is to increase awareness and educate women, their families, as well as the health care community about risks, symptoms, and treatment of ovarian cancer leading to earlier detection.

In 1998, a group of Atlanta women met each other at the St. Joseph's Gynecological Cancer Support Group. All ovarian cancer survivors with different stories to share, they began pooling their energies and passions with the intent to bring awareness of ovarian cancer and early detection to the forefront of women's health issues. The first step was to educate Georgia's women, their families and their healthcare providers about the risks, symptoms and treatments of ovarian cancer. This initial passion and their "Awareness. Knowledge. Action." campaign remains very much the focus of GOCA today.

Georgia Ovarian
Cancer Alliance

Since their beginning, GOCA has transformed from an idea hatched at a founders dining room table to a very strong, community based non-profit organization led by those touched by ovarian cancer in some way. With a strong base of supporters, volunteers, and staff they continue to reach thousands of women and their families with their life saving messages.
